On Sunday night, Brooklyn Nets 12-time NBA All-Star Kevin Durant sent out a tweet. Bleacher Report had posted a video (via capturedbymatt /IG) of Durant at a charity softball game in Portland. Bleacher Report wrote: "KD made a stop in Portland to play in a charity softball game Man of the people (via capturedbymatt /IG)" Durant quote tweeted: "4-4 2 RBI's for the first baseman" The former Texas star just finished up his 14th season playing in the NBA, and second for the Nets. He signed with the Nets in the summer of 2019, but missed the first season due to injury. This past season, he averaged 29.9 points on over 51% shooting from the field, and he also dished out a career-high 6.4 assists per game. However, the Nets were the seventh seed in the Eastern Conference, and they got swept in the first-round of the NBA Playoffs by Jayson Tatum and the Boston Celtics. Over the offseason, Durant's future with the Nets has become unclear. Recently, Shams Charania of The Athletic had a very big report about Durant and a meeting with Nets' owner Joe Tsai. Charania on August 8: "In a meeting with Nets owner Joe Tsai, Kevin Durant reiterated his trade request and informed Tsai that Tsai needs to choose between Durant or the pairing of general manager Sean Marks and coach Steve Nash, sources say." In addition to the Nets, the 2014 MVP (and two-time NBA Champion) has also played for the Golden State Warriors and Oklahoma City Thunder. A Bills Mafia member took things way too far while trying to get a Josh Allen autograph out at Bills camp this weekend -- and the QB was so mad over their attempt to get him to sign a football, he screamed at them. The incident with the Buffalo superstar was all captured on video ... when the 26-year-old signal-caller was jogging into the locker room after practice on Sunday. Waiting for your permission to load TikTok Post. You can see the Pro Bowler was waving at fans -- when a football still in its original cardboard packaging was thrown at him. Allen didn't have time to swat it away, and it caught him square in the groin. Immediately afterward, he stopped in his tracks, and scolded the fan who appeared to hurl it his way. Allen, while pointing into the stands, called the fan "disrespectful" repeatedly. Waiting for your permission to load TikTok Post. Stefan Diggs ran into a similar incident while out on the field Sunday as well -- as several fans threw jerseys and footballs at him to try to get his John Hancock. The 28-year-old wideout was stunned by what he saw, but he kept signing anyway. Took getting an autograph to another level @#AllStarGame pic.twitter.com/vbaaxYGWvj— Bleacher Report (@BleacherReport) July 19, 2022 @BleacherReport This ain't the first time we've seen fans go over the top for pro athletes' autographs this year ... just last month, a grown man was seen on video getting pushy with kids at the MLB All-Star game while trying to get a few things signed. Let's keep it classy, everyone. Baseball! No International Draft Coming After exchanging four proposals this month to no avail, MLB and the MLBPA could not come to terms on a new international draft format, meaning the current qualifying offer system and international signing period will remain unchanged (they had tied the fate of those two issues together at the end of the last round of CBA negotiations). Here's what the MLBPA had to say about the failure to come to terms: "At their core, each of our proposals was focused on protecting against the scenario that all Players fear the most — the erosion of our game on the world stage, with international players becoming the latest victim in baseball's prioritization of efficiency over fundamental fairness. The League's response fell well short of anything Players could consider a fair deal." MLB released a statement as well: "MLB worked to reach an agreement with the MLBPA to reform the international amateur system in ways that would address longstanding challenges and benefit future players," a league spokesperson wrote in a statement. "We are disappointed the MLBPA chose the status quo over transitioning to an international draft that would have guaranteed future international players larger signing bonuses and better educational opportunities, while enhancing transparency to best address the root causes of corruption in the current system." You'll remember that the international draft was a central sticking point in the CBA negotiations that delayed the start of the 2022 MLB season. Despite the two sides not agreeing by the deadline set in March, this won't be the end of the conversation about how baseball will address the current international signing structure, which is plagued by corruption. Alden González has more insight on what lies ahead: An international draft was considered, but it actually never stood a chance. MLB and the MLBPA never got close, for various reasons, and now the question is: What's next? Full story from today ... 🍀🍀 Alden González (@Alden_Gonzalez) July 25, 2022 Notable 2023 Hall of Fame Candidates With the 2022 Hall of Fame inductions behind us, we have an early look at some notable names that will join the ballot this winter. Francisco Rodriguez jumps out as an immediately strong candidate. Rodriguez pitched 15 seasons, with seven coming in Anaheim/Los Angeles and stops in New York (NL), Milwaukee, and Detroit. Rodriguez saved 437 games, logged 62 saves in 2008, and seven seasons with 30-plus saves. Rodriguez racked up 1,142 strikeouts and posted a 10.53 K/9. Carlos Beltrán hit 435 home runs and amassed 67.7 fWAR in 20 seasons, spending time with the Royals, Mets, Cardinals, Yankees, and Astros. If you can get past Beltrán's involvement in the Astros sign stealing scandal, maybe his .837 career OPS and nearly 500 home runs, and 312 stolen bases are enough to get him into Cooperstown eventually. The rest of the names on the list are pretty blah. However, I'm sure Michael will start the campaign for Cubs' first base coach and career 21.0 fWAR player Mike Napoli as soon as the ballot is released this winter (maybe sooner). Dallas, Texas Ranger Dallas Keuchel is the gift that keeps on giving this season. For opposing teams, that is. After posting a 2-5 record with a 5.63 ERA in 32 innings with the White Sox, he was reunited with his old pitching coach from Houston, Brent Strom, in Arizona. After a series of tune-ups, he made his Diamondbacks debut on June 26 and allowed four runs in four innings for the Diamondbacks against the Tigers. Keuchel's time in Arizona was short-lived after going 0-2 with an 8.68 ERA (20 ER, 18.2 IP), and he was DFA'd for the second time this season. If you thought that was it for the former Cy Young Award winner, you were wrong. Keuchel is heading to Texas on a minor league deal. TEX has agreed to terms on a minor league contract with LHP Dallas Keuchel, and he is expected to report to Round Rock (AAA) later this week. The 2015 A.L. Cy Young Award winner is a 2-time All-Star and 5-time Gold Glove Award winner. He has 12 starts for CWS and ARI in 2022.— Texas Rangers PR (@TXRangersPR) July 26, 2022 American League West offenses rejoice! If Keuchel's stint in Triple-A shows any signs of life, he'll be serving up 88 mph fastballs to you sometime next month. The 34-year-old southpaw owns an 8.53 ERA in 50.2 innings of work this season and if he gets promoted by the Rangers, he'll bring those numbers to his third MLB team this year. If I'm Julio Rodríguez, I'm dreaming of facing Keuchel between now and the end of the season. Odds and Ends ... Mets starter Jacob deGrom will head to Syracuse to make another rehab start tonight as he gears up for his return to the Mets, an addition that will surely help New York in their now-heated race with the Braves for the NL East crown. Mets starter Jacob deGrom is headed to Syracuse for another rehabilitation start Wednesday, according to the team.— Jeff Passan (@JeffPassan) July 25, 2022 Jeff Passan put together a mammoth trade deadline primer over at ESPN: The trade deadline primer I wrote was so big the bosses split it into two. Juan Soto seems to be doing awesome things every time he's at Dodger Stadium lately. (Don't even think about it Dodgers!) I was really glad that Alek Manoah added the "I was them" to the end of his proclamation that he wears the same underwear for every start... probably not be a fan of the pitch clock: The Phillies rebounded from their sweep at the hands of the Cubs with a big win over the Braves on Monday night, thanks to a five-RBI performance by rookie Bryson Stott.
